The Austin Strong Foundation is a non-profit organization that exists to raise awareness, fund research, and support those families affected by childhood cancers, like DIPG.

"The main goal of the Austin Strong Foundation is research," said Britt and Mikinzie Smith, who created the Austin Strong Foundation to honor their son, Austin Jeffrey Smith. "But, we believe part of being a successful foundation includes stewardship in our community, facilitating projects that will benefit our youth, and aligning with our mission of helping families."

On November 15th, the first concrete was poured for the playground foundation and in the spring the organization will host an official groundbreaking ceremony in Monticello.

“The ability to play is something all children should have the right to enjoy,” said Kinley, who knew Austin Smith before he lost his battle with DIPG in 2016 at the age of seven.

“He was going through more than I could ever imagine. He needed help with many simple things during his treatment that any other child would not think about, like using his own playground set in his backyard. One day while playing with him on the playground, I noticed how he was still a kid at heart and wanted nothing more than to be able to go down the slide again and again and again. The pure joy he got from the simplest acts of life has stuck with me ever since then. Austin truly was a superhero.”

Fundraising Goal Extended

Kinley hoped to raise $5,000 to support the construction of the Austin Smith Inclusive Playground and he has already received over $9,000 in donations through his GoFundMe campaign. His goal now is $10,000 by the end of his run on March 11th.

Supporters can make a contribution through Kinley's GoFundMe page and on his website, 333forDIPG.com
